POPULAR ADAPTATIONS

Cedar Cove, seasons 1-3

Based on the popular series by Debbie Macomber, this Hallmark series focuses on Municipal Court Judge Olivia Lockhart (Andie MacDowell), including both her professional and personal lives, as well as the lives of other residents in small Cedar Cove, Washington.

Dashing Through the Snow

Another Debbie Macomber adaptation, this one is a movie. Ashley (Meghan Ory) is scrambling to get home to Seattle, an effort complicated by her not being able to get a flight. As she makes a mad dash by car with a handsome stranger (Andrew W. Walker), complications ensue.

Maggie's Christmas Miracle

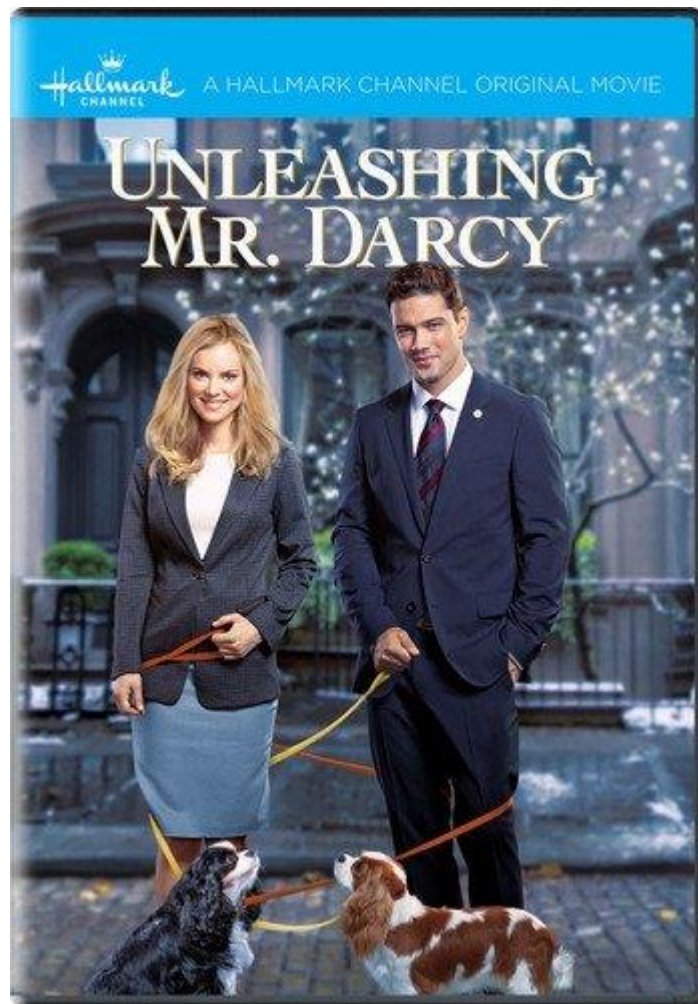

Based on a Karen Kingsbury novel, this heartwarming story focuses on Maggie (Jill Walker), who is juggling her responsibilities at work and as a single mom. However, during the holiday season, maybe her son Jordan's school tutor, Casey (Luke MacFarlane), is more than just a solution to Jordan's trouble at school. . . .

Aurora Teagarden series

This collection of TV movies is based on Charlaine Harris's book series. The protagonist is Aurora (Candace Cameron Bure), a librarian with an interest in true crime. In fact, every month she meets with several other like-minded souls for a club devoted to studying unsolved cases.

Unleashing Mr. Darcy

If you like Pride and Prejudice reboots, you might really enjoy this one set in modern-day New York. It pits Elizabeth (Cindy Busby), who is showing her Cavalier King Charles Spaniel at a local dog show, against a haughty dog show judge, Donovan Darcy (Ryan Paevey). You can guess what happens next. 😊

HALLMARK SERIES

The Good Witch, seasons 1-5

In this comedy fantasy series, the widowed Cassie (Catherine Bell) and her teenaged daughter Grace (Bailee Madison) are an, ahem, magical presence in the town of Middleton. And when a newly arrived doctor and his teenaged son move in next door, they don't know what to make of Cassie and Grace.

The Note I-III

This series of TV movies follows a newspaper columnist (Genie Francis) as she tries to track down the author of a note that is apparently connected to a plane crash. Along the way, she learns a lot about herself and maybe even finds love in the process. The sequels continue the story.

Signed, Sealed, and Delivered

A combination of a TV series and subsequent TV movies, these DVDs are about a group of postal workers who specialize in delivering undeliverable mail. From the same team that made Touched by an Angel, the show specialized in the same heartwarming stories about relationships and the human condition. Starring Eric Mabius and Kristin Booth.

When Calls The Heart

This popular Hallmark series, an adaptation of Janette Oke's series, centers on a small Western Canadian town, dominated by the local mine and timber trade, in the 1910s and focuses on the relationships between the various families in the town. Starring Erin Krakow, Lori Loughlin, and Martin Cummins.

HISTORICAL SETTINGS

The Magic of Ordinary Days

This popular Hallmark TV movie tells the story of Livvy (Keri Russell), an educated young woman, who finds herself in an arranged marriage with a farmer (Skeet Ulrich) in 1940s Colorado.

An Old-Fashioned Thanksgiving

Based on a Louisa May Alcott story, this TV movie focuses more on family than romance. Mary (Helene Joy) is widowed with 3 children, but she is none too happy when she finds out one of her children wrote their grandmother—Mary's mother (Jacqueline Bisset), whom she is estranged from—for help. Mary's mother arrives, but mother and daughter have some issues to work through for the holidays to go well.

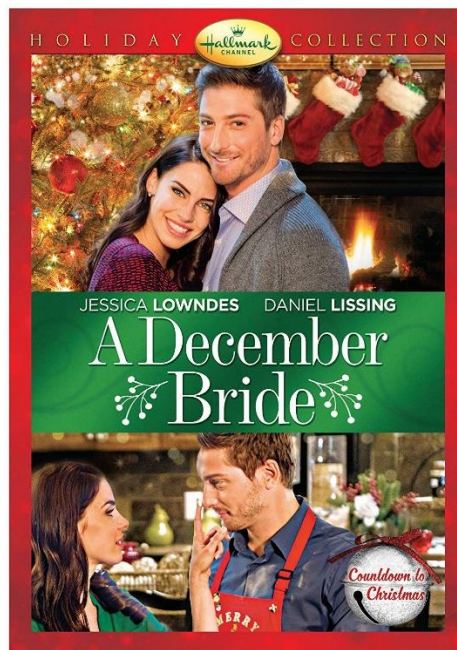

HALLMARK AND A WEDDING

A Country Wedding

Bradley (Jesse Metcalfe) is a famous country musician, and he seemingly has it all. Upon his engagement to a famous actress, he returns home to Texas and ends up reacquainting himself with Sarah (Autumn Reeser), his childhood sweetheart who now owns her own ranch. He should be getting ready for his own wedding, but all Bradley can wonder is if he is really marrying the right woman. . . .

A December Bride

Life has not been kind to Layla (Jessica Lowndes) lately. Her engagement broke up, her former fiancé is marrying her cousin, she's invited to the wedding, and her last-minute date to the wedding mistakenly announces at the reception that he and Layla are engaged. Mortifying! Or is it?

A Time to Dance

John (Dan Payne) and Abby (Jennie Garth) are high school sweethearts who have been married for years, but they are no longer happy together. Their plans to separate are put on hold when their daughter announces she is engaged. But is planning for their daughter's wedding just what they needed to remind them of their love for each other?

Seasonal Fun

The Irresistible Blueberry Farm

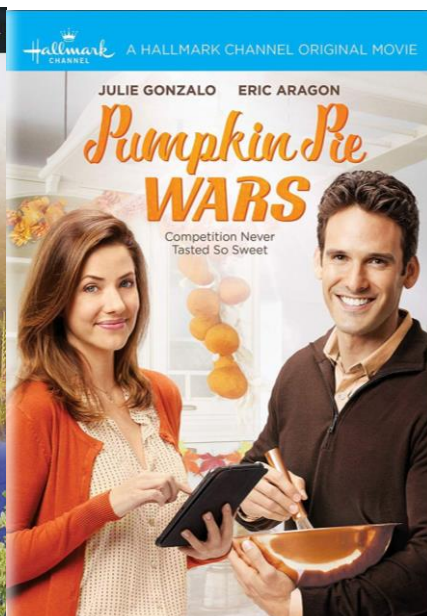

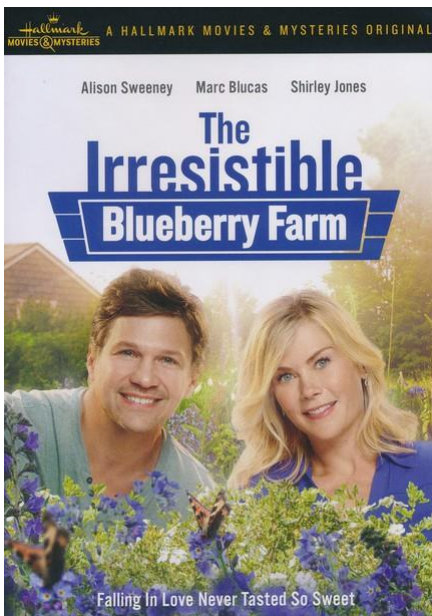

Ellen (Alison Sweeney) is a high-powered attorney tasked with an unusual request from her late grandmother—deliver a letter to a blueberry farm in Maine, where her grandmother was from. Along the way, Ellen learns a lot about her grandmother and herself. . . .

Pumpkin Pie Wars

A tale of intergenerational pumpkin pie rivalry. Former friends Faye (Michele Scarabelli) and Lydia (Jennifer-Juniper Angeli) opened their own rival bakeries after a terrible fight at a pumpkin pie contest. Their children—Sam and Casey (Rico Aragon and Julie Gonzalo)—are supposed to continue the family feud at the annual pie contest, but things get complicated when they fall in love instead.

Strawberry Summer

Beth's (Julie Mond) mom is hosting their rural town's annual strawberry festival, and Beth books one of her favorite musicians, a down-on-his-luck former country star named Jason Keith (Trevor Donovan). Beth's mother is not pleased, and indeed, Beth soon realizes that Jason's reputation for being difficult is well earned. But the more time they spend together, the more they might be able to help each other achieve their dreams.

A Hallmark Christmas

A Bramble House Christmas

A romantic mystery drama set during the holidays, the action centers around a mysterious will. After his father's death, Finn (David Haydn-Jones) is surprised to see that his dad left $100,000 to a woman named Willa (Autumn Reeser). Finn knows nobody named Willa and decides to go undercover to investigate. . . .

The Christmas Cure

A doctor (Brooke Nevin) returns to her hometown for Christmas. During her stay she reconnects with her high school sweetheart and learns that her father, also a doctor, is planning to retire. Should she stay for good and take over her father's practice?

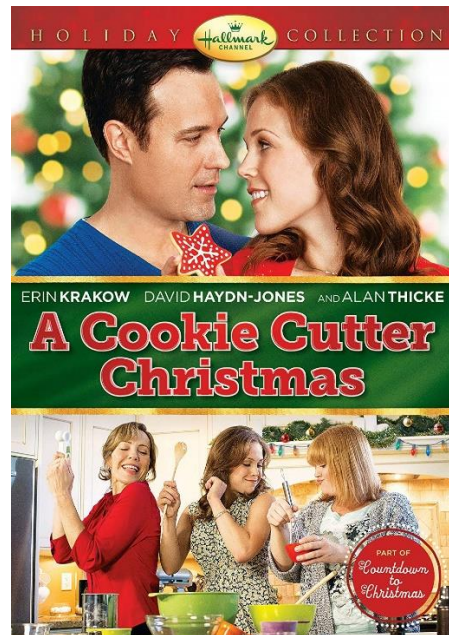

Christmas Magic

Carrie (Lindy Booth) is an in-demand event planner, but her life changes in an instant in a terrible car wreck. She awakens to discover that she is en route to heaven but before going, she must help a depressed, widowed restaurant owner (Paul McGillion) with a small child revamp his business. She has until Christmas Eve, and though her work is a success, complications ensue as they both start to fall in love.

A Cookie Cutter Christmas

Christie (Erin Krakow) and Penny (Miranda Frigon) have been rivals since they were children. Even though they're now adults, teaching in the same school, nothing has changed. But their rivalry kicks into overdrive when a handsome single dad (David Haydn-Jones) enrolls his daughter in the school. They begin a cookie-baking battle that makes their previous rivalry look tame.

Ice Sculpture Christmas

Callie (an aspiring chef played by Rachel Boston) and the childhood friend she has recently reunited with (David, played by David Alpay) enter an ice sculpture contest against Callie's boss. Along the way, Callie and David find love and Christmas cheer.

It's Christmas, Eve

Eve Morgan's (LeAnn Rimes) new assignment as a school superintendent in her hometown is a tough one—close down the local music program. However, with Eve's own musical background and her growing friendship with Luke, the local music teacher, that's going to be easier said than done.

A Royal Christmas

Prince Leopold (Stephen Hagan) has studied incognito in Philadelphia, not publicizing the fact he is the heir to the throne of Cordinia. During his time there, he falls in love with an all-American commoner named Emily (Lacey Chabert). The news is not well-received, however, by Leopold's mother Queen Isidora (Jane Seymour).

Switched for Christmas

What are two estranged twin sisters (Candace Cameron Bure, in a dual role) to do when they finally get together before Christmas for lunch and realize they're both unhappy with their lives and envious of the other one? Trade places, of course!

A Very Merry Mix-Up

Alice Chapman's (Alicia Witt) nerves about meeting her fiancé's family for Christmas go into overdrive when she loses her luggage and her phone. Her fiancé (Scott Gibson) is not with her, so she manages the best she can and has no clue that she ends up going to the wrong family's house for the holidays. But is it fated?

A Hallmark Valentine's Day

Anything for Love

Kate (Erika Christensen) has an online dating profile set up by her office assistant, which matches her with Jack (Paul Greene). Unbeknownst to Jack, a friend of his has altered his profile to claim he is a doctor, while Kate's profile disguises the fact she is a high-profile business executive. Complications ensue.

Very, Very Valentine

Helen (Danica McKellar) is a florist who meets someone she thinks is the man of her dreams at a masquerade ball. The only problem is she didn't catch his name. The only clue she has is his boutonniere, but that's better than nothing. She sets off to find him, with the aid of her friend Henry (Cameron Mathison).

Hallmark for any Occasion

Royal Wedding Collection

This collection features two Meghan Markle movies and then a non-Markle one focusing on royalty. Dater's Handbook stars Markle as a woman unlucky in love who tries a dating handbook for advice. In When Sparks Fly, Markle is a journalist who returns to her hometown for a story and finds herself reconnecting with a former boyfriend. Royal Hearts is the Markle-less movie and stars James Brolin and Cindy Busby as a father-daughter duo who are stunned to learn they inherited a kingdom.

An Uncommon Grace

Grace (Jes Macallan) moves to her grandmother's (Kelly McGillis) farm in Amish Country following a tour of duty as an Army nurse. Once there, she is called to the scene of a shooting at an Amish farm. She finds herself attracted to Levi (Sean Faris), one of the members of the Amish family who own the farm, while also embroiled in getting to the bottom of the shooting. Meanwhile, Levi struggles with his own forbidden feelings for Grace.
